3. When Michael Faraday was twelve.....
4. Reading became Michael Faraday's

Michael Faraday is regarded as one of the most distinguished scientists and inventors of modern times, and his work on electricity is still a subject of study, in the form of Faraday's Laws. But few know his inspirational life story, which is all about courage and fighting against the odds.

Michael Faraday was born into a poverty-stricken family in a dirty London suburb. He suffered from a speech defect as a child. He would pronounce 'rabbit' as 'wabbit'. He could not even say his own name and would call himself 'Faraday'. Other children laughed at him and the teachers did not help him either. When he was twelve, his mother was forced to take him out of school, thus putting an end to his formal education.

At thirteen, however, he started working with a bookbinder, binding hundreds of books during the day and staying up all night to read them. Reading thus became his obsession. One day he came across a book on electricity that had been sent to his master for binding. He started reading it and was utterly hooked. That was his first introduction to the subject of electricity, which soon became a lifelong fascination.

- Folk art conveys deep thought.
- The roots of folk arts lie in women's daily chores.
- Designs are not important in the Gond style of art.
- Special attention is not given to the choice of various colors.

This richness is reflected in the choice of their medium. In the days the past, several things in nature such as soils of different shades, the juice of plants, leaves, tree bark, flowers, fruits, and even things like coal and cow dung were used to prepare colors. The different colors, various textures, and patterns were used year after year, lending simplicity to the art. When we see these pictures, we realize that a picture drawn this way or the other can look equally beautiful. What a deep thought this art conveys – and so easily!

In the Gond style of art, we see that the outline may vary a little from artist to artist but the designs that fill it make the whole picture look lively and attractive. The designs include simple texture achieved using dots, straight lines, dotted lines, curvy shapes, and circles. Special attention is given to the choice of various colors so that the total effect is amazing and beautiful.

In today's age of commercialization, many men have taken up Gond's art. But the roots of folk arts probably lie in women's daily chores like cleaning and decorating the houses, dealing with natural colors in the course of cooking, and in their leisure time activities.

- (c) waves (3) brother
- (d) cloud (4) child

Rise, brothers, rise; the wakening skies pray to the morning light,

The wind lies asleep in the arms of the dawn like a child that has cried all night. Come, let us gather our nets from the shore and set our catamarans free,

To capture the leaping wealth of the tide, for we are the kings of the sea!

No longer delay, let us hasten away in the track of the seagull's call,

The sea is our mother, the cloud is our brother, and the waves are our comrades all. What though we toss at the fall of the sun where the hand of the sea god drives? He who holds the storm by the hair will hide in his breast our lives.

A2. Answer the following:

Who are called the kings of the sea? Why are they not afraid of the sea? (2) A3. Find two pairs of rhyming words from the extract. (1)

Appreciation of the poem. (5 marks)

Read the given poem and write an appreciation of the poem using the points given below of the poem.

Silver

Slowly, silently, now the moon Walks the night in her silver shoon;
This way, and that, she peers, and sees Silver fruit upon silver trees;
One by one the casements catch
Her beams beneath the silvery thatch; Couched in his kennel, like a log, With paws of silver sleeps the dog;
From their shadowy cote the white breasts peep Of doves in silver feathered sleep
A harvest mouse goes scampering by, With silver claws, and silver eye;
And moveless fish in the water gleam, By silver reeds in a silver stream.

4. A trunk acts like

The elephant trunk is a very important organ, without which it cannot exist. It may be called the lifeline of an elephant. It is as essential for the elephant as the hands are for us. It is an extension of the nose and upper lip. For elephants, it performs the functions of hands, nose, and lips. They have also developed a heavy head. Since a heavy head cannot be carried on a long neck, so elephants need long trunks to reach their food. The trunk has about 40.000 muscles. Because of such a high number of muscles, it is flexible and strong. It can lift huge wooden poles with its trunk. The tip of the trunk is just like a finger and is so sensitive that it can even lift a needle. It carries its food to its mouth with its help. It also drinks water with the help of the trunk. To take baths it fills water in it, curls it up, and pours that over its back. Thus, we can see how the trunk is very useful for the elephant.
