(iv) The big langur noticed the assault of the writer. False

I glanced towards the roof of the club house and saw something horrible. A big male langur, apparently the leader of its group, was holding a baby langur in his hands and mercilessly biting it all over with a definite intent to kill. The helpless mother of the baby and other lesser members of the langur group were scattered on the roofs of the buildings nearby watching the baby being killed. I recalled the terrible custom in the animal clan according to which a dominant male usually does not allow another male baby or adult to survive within its group. Without losing any time, I gathered a stout stick in one hand and hurled a piece of stone at the marauding langur. The langur was so infuriated that it hardly took any notice of my assault. But then I started throwing more stones. The dogs on their part raised their pitch of cry

(A5) Do you think that the custom of baby killing by dominant male in animal clan is good? Explain.

Ans: The custom of dominant male animals killing babies is a natural way for them to make sure their own babies survive. It helps them have more babies of their own. However, this can seem unkind to us because it causes suffering for the baby animals. Whether this is good or bad depends on how we look at it - from a nature point of view, it helps the strong animals have more babies, but from a human point of view, it can seem unkind.
